Steam / Catalina 32-bit App-ocalypse notes:

I had roughly 1000 Mac games in my Steam library pre-Catalina.

Today, the number of runnable 64-bit Mac games sits at 278.

~72% of my Mac Steam library was killed off.

Catalina isn't the first "extinction event" for MacOS games, of course, just the first where it's easy to get numbers.

The 68000 -> PowerPC, PowerPC -> Intel and classic MacOS -> OS X all killed off large numbers, although not all at once.

There are also curious "un-extinction" milestones.

PowerPC -> Intel meant that DOSBox was viable, which opened up pretty much every DOS game as "native" (for wobbly definitions of native).

Emulation has, similarly, reopened some doors. Sheepshaver and Basilisk II can run 68k and PowerPC classic Mac games on modern macOS, although if we're being honest, support is super-shaky and it's often a miserable experience with lots of crashing.
